Prestons project update

Sometimes questions are better than answers. This has been an underlying posture for those of us involved with the Prestons project as we've continued to explore what it means to be church in our context. We're learning to make peace with the feeling of uncertainty—not quite being sure of what to do, or how to do it. Ultimately what we've ended up with has mostly come about by prayer and conversation, listening to hunches, giving something a go and seeing how it went – in other words guess and check...

Currently about five families get together once a month in the local Plunket rooms for Prayer and Pancakes – a mostly social gathering where we share a pancake breakfast and space of prayer together. Some of these families connect more regularly, and are currently exploring the idea of forming some sort of a homegroup for those interested. A subgroup from within these five families also oversee and facilitate a weekly community preschool music group for local kids and parents; this has been valuable connection with the wider community. We're also just in the 'listening to a hunch' stage of finding a regular space of worship together. This feels like the next natural step for the project.

Having more questions than answers seems to be part of deal with exploring!
